

Special Offer

for Students and Alumni of University of Washington Nonprofit Management and Fundraising Management Certificate Programs

What exactly distinguishes great leaders from merely good ones? According to many leadership experts, it isn't IQ or technical skills. It's emotional intelligence, or EQ – a group of personal and relationship skills that enable the best leaders to maximize their own and their team's performance.

During this one-day workshop, you will engage in experiential activities with horses to strengthen your leadership and EQ skills. Building on the leadership competencies and skills woven throughout the curriculum for the NonProfit Management and Fundraising Management Certificate Programs, this session offers you a dynamic and powerful learning experience filled with 'in the moment' discoveries that can lead to transformational change in leadership style and effectiveness. Come discover how working with horses can help increase your EQ!

Why Horses?

- You just can't fake it with a horse, no matter how hard you try.
- Horses are direct reflections of the people that handle them.
- Horses are very perceptive. They pick up messages that we miss, or are unaware that we are giving.
- Horses have the ability to read our emotions that are below the surface.
- Horses respond to our emotional honesty rather than our actions.

Benefits and Results

- Learn how body language is a primary source of communication.
- Learn how to trust your feelings and your 'gut'.
- Gain greater awareness of your own emotions and how to use them constructively.
- Expanded personal power, and self-confidence as a leader.
- Determine how your behavior as a leader affects your communications and relationships with others.
